

Mental health as a key success factor for companies (Part II)

Mental health care is becoming increasingly relevant in today's world. Particularly due to the increasing number of diagnoses of mental illness, it is becoming more significant that measures are also taken in the working world to protect employees mentally. But what is the current situation and what can be done?

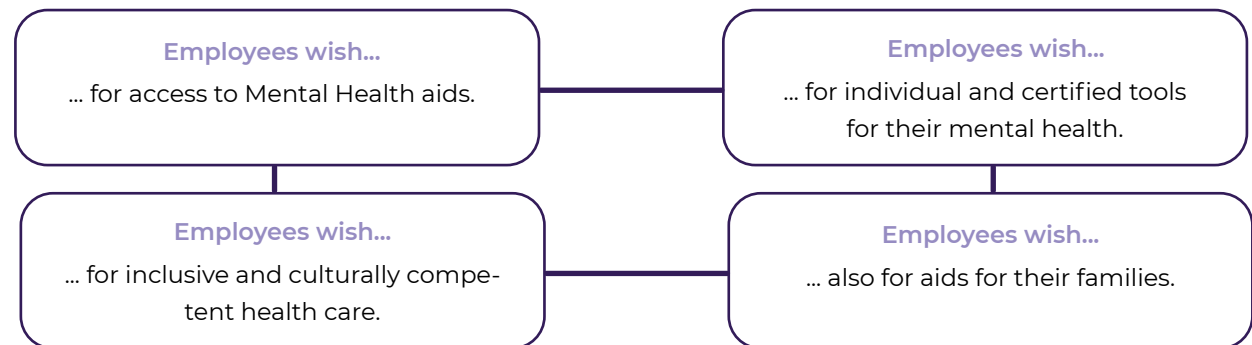

This is how stressed employees currently feel

Employees call in sick more often for mental reasons

What employees want from their company

Are you looking for highly qualified experts? We are happy to help with selection and activation.

